It's really too bad it had to turn out that way.
What happened to the friends you had yesterday?
Now they have gone; they've always won,
But you know they'll come back when they want some
fun.

They took you for a ride down a one-way road.
They have no respect for the feelings they owe.
Now they have gone; they've always won,
fun.

Well they're knocking again at your front door;
Now the carpet's stained crimson, where you lie on the floor.
Now they have gone; they've always won,
fun.
