I've always loved the way, your hair got caught in your teeth, when you screamed at me.

And how your eyes, streamed mad tears toward your feet.

and I'd would just fall in love again, with someone I loved since I met her.

So you changed by thinking, about how consequences have changed you

You left me for schooling, and fooling yourself that you'd be better off alone

Or with your therapist, dreaming of a better life, out of town.

A town without your mother, screaming at each other

A town without your daddy, gambling for a caddy

A town that don't have me.

You said an old lady, made your green tea leaves
"rea;d."

She said someday, you'd be a fiancée with twins on the way

I smiled and laughed, at that old lady's paid-for tales

And wanted your twins to be mine

But you'll be....

In a town without your mother, screaming at each other

A town without your daddy, gambling for a caddy

A town that don't have me.

I'm a living in a city, mistaking drag queens for girls

Drinking beer thinking of you at a quarter to two on third avenue

Thinking how I'm gonna marry you someday

When you're a thousand miles away from me.

A thousand miles away from me.
