

Bullets For Breakfast "Solitude"

Visit "Solitude" on MotoLyrics.com

How's your cousin,
is she still the babysitter?
And how's your husband,
do you still act like nothing is wrong?
And how's your daughter,
does she have a baby sister?
And how's your father,
does he still make you bitter?

And do you remember reading,
One hundred years of solitude?
That has become the story of me and you

(toda vi a lo amas)

How's your mother,
did you finally learn to forgive her?
You're like one another,
You both left someone out in the cold
But I forgive you,
And I forgive you,
And I forgive you,
I forgive you,

And do you remember reading,
One Hundred Years of Solitude?
That has become the story of me and you...

(Do you remember December 18th?)

Visit Bullets For Breakfast page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.