"Morning Shadows"

Plodding, morning shadows blanket the cracks along the patio Droplets fall into tiny pools that brighten with the white light of renewal As one memory eludes me another consumes me
A pane of glass fogged by breath from nostrils keeping me at bay from a world less hostile
The world is so vain and uncertain!
A death in the family and I'm in love again
New day
New day
New day
New day
Melting frost on the juniper Greyness evolves into a spectrum of color
