Caught and beaten, once the witch hunters have tracked you down

Taken to a filthy cell to be prepped for your confession and lesson, you'll be shown just what the hands of god will do while the church has you kneeling down under it's rule

The crime and shame of the inquisition horrible tortured, brutally burned. Degredation stifled decency The filthiest passions masqueraded under the cover of religion, killing to bestow the fear of god

The floodgates of persecution have opened wide
The biblical delusions of the churches' mind Bigotry and rigidity, ruled as their oppression grew

Never were so many so wrong so long

Once accused, there is no escape, condemned to die By burning at the stake first, you're tortured to the brink of death inquisitors never took a rest they won't stop until you've taken your last breath

Life, an infinitesimal speck on the limitless canvas of Eternity, a seething cesspool of human emotions gone sour, it destroyed the principles of honor and justice a cauldron filled with two hundred yars of pain it opened wide the rosters for the hall of shame

Subverted to condemn bestialities
