Evolution, dawn of light
The stage has now been set
The naked primate stands alone
With gift of reason blessed
Animalistic realisation
Instinct to survive
Controlling his environment
To prosper and to thrive
Plot unfolds, his mind expands
Morals and foundations
On his beliefs he builds a world
Fashioning his nation
Foreshadowing his own fate
Reason: evil's mother
He learns that he can live his life
at the expense of others

Gleeful of corruption
Malignant to the last man takes pride in his deceit
Born in ages past
His world rots from inside-out
Feeds it as he can
Parasitic malediction:
Tragedy of Man

Ironic as it seems
There are no broken dreams
Only shattered lives

Man's hypocrisy
His suicidal glee
No reason to revive
Ambition slain by greed
Which satisfied his need
Could have made him great
But instead he chose to fall
Now it's far too late

Digging his own grave
By his hate enslaved
Blessed with reasoning

Selfishness his king

Man now lives in fear
A shadow looming near
He can sense his end
The terror won't recede
Reflective of his deeds,
His mind begins to bend
Tormented by his mind
He can never find
Comfort in his day
He's haunted evermore
By a death he's waiting for He's happiest that way
This twist of fate implies
That man never dies
His thoughts and madness swell
Into his living Hell
