"A Thousand Rivers"

Thousands of years have passed Still we do not know O tell me, please, tell me what lies beyond our comprehension

We are nothing but autumn leaves swirling in the circles of time Haunted by the shadow in our past

Time won't sweep away our deepest scars of memories
It will carry them along eternally

Betrayed by the enigma of existence Yet, we admire this insignificance
O shameful, pathetic

Listen carefully to the sound of an evening breeze And the sound of a thousand rivers struggling towards the sea

But all is so dead and silent Well, this way it's got to be
