Getting hard to compromise with nothing left to give Getting hard to rationalize all those things you did How do you see yourself in your memories... crowds of ugly faces, the thousands that you've been

There's a you, and there's a you that you want me to see
There's a you, and there's a you that you want to be But deeper inside - what you're trying to hide - is the you most apparent to me So fool the eyes, flaunt that fucking disguise if that's what you take living to mean

Empty... reflections all that I see

Laugh with them, they laugh at you... your acceptance is the joke Accept it when they reject you, it's funny you don't know Change and re-arrange yourself, kill what will not fit Blame yourself, estrange yourself... you're empty, full of shit

There's a you, and there's a you that you want me to see
There's a you, and there's a you that you keep trying to be

Pretty fascinating, oscilating side-to-side Always entertaining, always changing... quite a life Reflected and refracted, you name it and you've been it Just smile hard, throw back your head and show me that you mean it

There's a you, and there's a you that you want me to see
There's a you, and sad but true, a you that you'll never
