I long await the day when I see you again,
Be with you again.
Time keeps on telling me to wait.
When my eyes are closed, I see you standing beside me, telling me it's okay.

How long do I wait? Now that you left me, to see your face again.
To know that you're safely stored in a memory, it keeps
me alive.

But it burns me out from the inside, now you're gone.
How long before I see the light?
That shines so brightly from your eyes,
As I walk into your arms.

The face that changed the human race will be here
again,
So I'll see you again.
Nothing will ever be the same.
The first breathe you take, I'll be there right beside you.
The day won't be late.

How long do I wait? Now that you left me, to see your face again.

To know that you're safely stored in a memory, it keeps
me alive.

But it burns me out from the inside, now you're gone.
How long before I see the light?
That shines so brightly from your eyes,
As I walk into your arms.

[Instrumental]

How long do I wait? Now that you left me, to see your

To know that you're safely stored in a memory, it keeps

But it burns me out from the inside, now you're gone.

How long before I see the light?
That shines so brightly from your eyes,
As I walk into your arms.

But it burns me out from the inside, now you're gone.
How long before I see the light?
That shines so brightly from your eyes,
As I walk into your arms.
