You saw a sign on a pick up truck

You bought a guitar with a borrowed buck -
And you dig it and you dig it.
They liked your songs they were hot for you

You got the job
there was work to do -
And you dig it and you dig it.

But waiting
there was someone waiting for you

Claiming a piece of everything that you do.
It seems I've heard your story all before

Someone's standing knocking at your door.

The early morning wake up call -
Your bags are packed and in the hall
The managers ran off with all the money that you made.

You hit on the stage nearly every night

You worked around till you get it right -
And you dig it and you dig it.
And then you signed for a record deal

And off you go on the music wheel -
And you dig it and you dig it.
But waiting
there was someone waiting for you

The early morning wake up call - . . .

You made the charts and all the hangers on were hanging on

Flashing knives behind your back living in your money sack

And you were thinking you got it made.

Waiting
there was someone waiting for you

...
Your record isn't selling well the tickets to your shows don't sell

You look around and suddenly you find that you've got leprosy.

The taxman's coming after you your lawyer and your girlfriend too

And the managers ran off with all the money that you made.

And you dig it and you dig it -
and you dig it and you dig it.
