O' my weighing mind
like all the earth.
My life fading
behind the moss.

In the shelter of these primal trees
forsaken I may lie.
The birds, they're gone,
leaves are my only company.

Once will the worldly curtain
fall before all men.
O' hear me sing this one last song

echoing through the heavens.

Tears of my heart,
dewfall of my soul.
Let the wind carry
my cares afar.

Once will the worldly curtain
fall before all men.
O' hear me sing this one last song
echoing through the heavens.
