There's a silent scream
A broken dream
She believed in lots of things
No more she will believe

There's a frozen tear
Warmth's disappeared
Before her very eyes
No more tears she will cry

One more cloudy day
Not much to say
A sadness in the air
No more smiles she will share

Have to leave this place
The darkest haze
Is surrounding all her thought
She's closing the door

You can hear her screaming
You can hear her calls
Within her heart there's feelings

And there's lots of more

Now it's time to see
Time to hear
Progression that we've done
And the things that we've become

Start another fight
A hopeless sight
Is this what we have learned
Is this what the earth has earned

She's not weak
But her strength has limitations
God let her see the light
No man knows her destination
Her face is pale, pale white
And while the sky's crying for her

We're all crying for her
Too late - her fate
She's dead and gone
