(Les Holroyd)
driving down the road
under the southern light looking back to see where we've come from
as we watched the sun go down rain it fell like diamonds from kimberely mines
on the road to jo-burg
with the dying light
farewell durban
c ity of natal
stopped awhile to stretch my thoughts as we crossed the borderline and into transvaal
i saw the sun go down
under the southern skies
over and over
i'll always remember
those beautiful african nights
in the old v.w.
we'd count the m iles
we travelled with a friend whose name was farr
the stories that he told us talked of faces
times and places
sang and played his guitar
driving down the road
we hear the morning rise leaving all the past
so far behind
the sound-man played t he "the eagles"
as we listen
"take it easy"
echoes on through our lives
over and over

i still hear them call
no matter how far
