the sun is slowly dying,
the night is glowing blue.
you're half laughing, half crying
'cause nothing feels right tonight.

the fireflies are going,
the summer has been kind.
and it's funny not knowing,
if only we could make it last, but

i'll see you again
(i'll be waiting here)
i'll see you again
(i'll wait a hundred years)
hold me close to your heart of hearts and
i'll see you again.

the days have gotten colder
ever since you went away.
even though i'm getting older,
i'm still waiting for that day.
how long will you remember the secrets that we made?
this coming september,
we'll both be busy, i know, but

i'll see you again
(i'll be waiting here)
i'll see you again
(i'll wait a hundred years)
hold me close to your heart of hearts and
i'll see you again.

and i'll be back after everyone's gone.
waiting for you is where i belong.
tick tock tick, the clock pushes on,
and killing time is killing me but i'll be fine until then, 'cause

i'll see you again
(i'll be waiting here)
i'll see you again

(i'll wait a hundred years)
hold me close to your heart of hearts and
i'll see you again.

i'll see you again
(i'll be waiting here)
i'll see you again
(i'll wait a hundred years)
hold me close to your heart of hearts and
i'll see you again.
