"Nothing Compares To You"

I will dream of someone else tonight, I see you in a different light. I see you from another point of view but nothing compares to you. Here in the library of love, I've turned another page, a paragraph of joy and happiness, in volumes of tears and pain.

It seems such a long time and still I'm on my knees, I try to pick up the fragments of a broken heart that cut through my fingers I knew that nothing compares to you.

Now I'm trapped in this armour rusted shut, I hear the voices don't give up. Afraid my heart might turn into a stone I chose to be all alone.
