in winter, in winter
the poets speak of rain
but I sing of thee:
snow, there is nothing warmer,
as though the clouds were unraveling or the stars, dropping from the skies

Snow: everywhere, carefully descending so white, so cold, so beautiful

the snow offers his coat under a night of blue, purple and black pearls fall on an ivory world

in winter, in winter
the snow floats in open air and hangs like a curtain at night, the moon, she rises and all is revealed bathed in silver mist bathed in mystery

but I sing of thee:
snow, there is nothing warmer,
