I don't understand what you're asking me we put so much into this machine we never get on the board so what do you want it for? You think I should be with you when you make it to level two and you've got nothing but time now and then game over game over again. Now looking back on those happy times we should be put away for our crimes. We got away with it then but who's to say if we will again? We come together for more than games we pull apart looking for some change but still we know just how it's going to end game over game over again. And in this land of a thousand kills, you lose control of your motor skills you lose control of your life, and blow apart in a flash of light. But after everything here we are and who'd have thought we would get this far so when they say insert coins insert coins in game over game over again.
