I heard your words to mess with fate tonight

I kept its time cause Iâ'm not here to please myself

I kept my soil clean of tandem runs and armored verbs

Who escape your sight while you sleep
Prospects of images to foil rounds of memories

Iâ've kept my mind made up your absence faints away

All these damaged pleas amidst the stringent beauty fly

Who all want to run away while you sleep
And I would whisper

And aren't I getting a little old for this

Abandon my structure to the storm

And aren't we getting a little used to this

This holding tight and standing firm
The North Shore reminds me of your face tonight

Surely weâ'll meet when all enfolds

A place in the sand where I can still feel the warmth of the nights we used to keep

Holding confinements on the edge of space

By bonfires we sat about

More or less postponing our place

In the structure of grace I stood
And I would whisper to you

Would you keep me close at bay

Slowly reaching the light of day

Im always leaving but

I can hold you where I stand
How striking it is to recall that voice

I used to speak in parables to size you up

Your little big world how does it respond

How does it relate to me

Of a truth this is insanity

I knew id lose my mind

But duty calls the human heart back to the dust
The songs of ancient ships still always call my name

Sojourner escape my sight while I sleep

The shutter's lies destroy your face
I know I'm leaving
Would you keep me close at bay

Slowly reaching the light of day

Im always leaving but

I can hold you where I stand
I whisper I know I am leaving but vapours never seemed more important and I know time is wasted on too many actions that in the end don't justify any means at all

I hear the voice of one crying out tonight

Prepare ye the way of the Lord
The North Shore reminds me of your face tonight

Surely we'll meet when all enfolds

A place in the sand where I can still feel the warmth of

Holding confinements on the edge of space

You said You placed eternity in our hearts and I know it's there

I knew it all along
