I'm a walking worst case scenario most the time. I've always crashed and burned. Started out in total confusion which only got worse with every screw I turned. But as I've gotten older there's one thing I have learned.

As life goes on you get more and more out of it. I'm more out of it then I ever used to be. And they say you get out of what you put into it. Out of it is everything to me.

Life depends on how you like yourself. What'll it be? Well done scrambled or fried. Which affectation seem the least effective (well appears) the fact to reveal the man inside. But don't advertise your affectations. It's just not dignified.

As life goes on you get more and more out of it. I'm more out of it in every single way. And they say you get out of it what you put into it. I get more out of it each day. I get more out of it each day.
