I hear your voice out side my door
This time you came too early, to drop your snowflakes on my floor.
When i let you in you will begin, reading these old white stories?
I've heard them, but i want some more

Winter your white dress looks so nice
I hear your white song day and night
The words of that song I know so well
You put my life under your spell

You throw your snowballs at my face Showing your tricks and laughing, bringing me joy inside my tears
But when some day you'll fly away, living all nature crying,
I'm still gonna see you in my dreams

Winter your white dress looks so nice
I hear your white song day and night
The words of that song I know so well
You put my life under your spell
