Well I was walkin' down the street yeah, when I met this nice girl and I said I think I like you, she said I think I like you better. She took me to meet her parents I was quite apprehensive. But then I didn't comply her, I shoulda have been honored. She wanted me to stay but I had to walk away. Don't you stay forever I may not be here til the end. If were not together at least we could still be friends. I'm remember her in the kitchen, the dinner she was fixing her father did not like me he scowled just despite me. We sat down at the table I passed the salt and pepper. She didn't pass the mustard but instead I spilled my drink. She wanted me to stay but I had to walk away. She wanted me to stay but I had to run away. I saw her 3 months later, she had a brand new friend. He tried to educate her on all levels strange. I said I am so sorry she did not understand. You've changed not for the better she tried to make a stand. I wanted you to stay but instead you ran away. I wanted you to stay but instead you walked away. Don't you stay forever I may not be here til the end. If were not together at least we could still be friends. She wrote me a long letter she had a brand new reason. Just after I had left her she was going to prison. If I had not left her we'd still be together, she still regrets the day I decided not to say. She still regrets the day I decided not to stay, she still regrets the day that I turned and walked away.
