You never know what you have till it's lost to someone else
You never understand until the end You never want to be advised of what you had And yet, you never have a shadow of a doubt You never think about anything until it doesn't matter You never see a clear picture without Then all at once, your life falls apart and you're left within the depths of a personal hell, unable to be broken away from, and you wonder what if you had done different and you realize nothing really matters You always did everything they way they wanted, but never how they expected You always protected as they knew you would, disregarding the loss
You always trusted, but sometimes too much (Refrain)
Then all at once, you wonder why You recapture all the stabb ings
you pull out the knife and stare at the wounds, the scars that you never knew existed When did they How could they What were they Why would they Where have they Who are they
