How can it allow the novice to assume
Its hierarchy of supremacy
A force or perhaps a being
That taught us to forgive thy enemy

Their stances are stern
Their battle lines drawn
But will God claim the heathens
Awaiting the age of a new dawn

God has abandoned us
Sneered upon our example with disgust
The lord learned not to revere us
Because we treasure darkness instead of holiness

The antichrists stronghold
Seems evident in the pagan mannered culture
God is a rotting carcass
Its meat picked clean by satanic vultures

Satisfied with the unpure practice of occultism
The majority of man lending credence everyday
His instincts led him on a path less trodden
Mysticism earnestly guides his way
