Walking the vast stretch
Of darkened back streets
At every turn of a corner
Its a mystery whom you will meet
Wondering whether they are armed
Or if they intend to harm
Instincts are judged when eyes meet
Its either the signal of safety or hovering defeat
The moon is rather full
So the tale of odd behavior is presented
As the animalistic nature of man is awakened
A young women recalls what she could have prevented
While lying in a garbage dumpster
Bloody and sodomized
She shudders in pure terror
Knowing she was victimized
Yet the moon has a way
Of turning the tables
A magnificent prowess for strengthening fables
And strangely enough
The rapist who denied her of precious breath
Became enslaved in a narcotics situation
And was vengefully bludgeoned to death
