

A Fond Farewell "Atlantic Pacific"

You're across the Atlantic, my cold ocean, so far from home.

I sincerely hope you have the time of your life.

I'm sure it will be a summer to remember but I hope I forget,

Though it doesn't seem likely that you'll be off my mind.

The mark you've made on my life is indelible; you're my girl in the white dress, yeah.

I'm sure the sun won't shine as bright without you.

I hope you find someone who loves you like I do.

I hope he makes you happy forever.

I hope he helps you find whatever it is that you've been looking for.

I hope he never forgets what he's got.

I hope he tells you you're beautiful, and that your smile lights up the room.

I bet he'll say it much better than me.

I don't think you would, but don't worry about me;

I'll be fine.

I'll stay out of your life now, I promise.

Don't come looking for me, 'cause I won't be where you knew me anymore.

I'll raise my sail, catch the westward wind, and fly away.

Fly away.

Maybe I'll land in California.
