-- -----

The day grows older

The moon appears in a mirror

A fire side mirror

A distant walker

Hears the words

Do do good deeds

So you feel ok

The moon and the sun

Partners in light

Separating reflecting one light

Hearing this confusion wanes

No need to ask for wealth

Or one thing more now

And the night

Feels the same

As a cool hot summers climb

With the voice

Comes no shame

As the walker walks the line

The day grows older

The moon appears
Reflecting on his heart
Heavy weighed and pierced
The walker looks at his days
Bad deeds gone by
For which he must pay
The moon and the sun
Partners in light
Separating reflecting one light
Hearing this confusion wanes
Another image hits
The seven veils of mind
But the night
Feels the same
As a cool hot summers climb
With the voice comes no shame
As the walker hunts the line
