"That's How A Heartache Begins"

Tell a little white lie and then multiply it by ten, and then, that's how a heartache begins Mix some flowers he bought with a date he forgot to attend, and then, that's how a heartache begins I know about heartaches, I know all the mistakes that young love can make, I've made them So, let's still be friends to the soft violins, I've listened while somebody played them Called his number in vain, again and again, he's not in, but then, that's how a heartache begins That's how a heartache begins, that's how a heartache begins
