"Looking Into The Light"

There's a little bit of something in me
That will hold on to the light that I cant see
That will lift my hands to stars that I cant reach
That will send me walking down those city streets
There's a voice that I hear whisper in my ear
Words I understand but never hear
And I pray that years and miles will make it clear
That something takes me anywhere but here

Now Im starting to see
That this place was never meant for me
I've filled up your pages, wrestled the clocks
Now I'm waiting for the rain to stop

There's a hope that I keep beating in my heart
The strength to stand, and will to grow apart
What I would give to be there where you are
To see you move and dance among the stars
Now every streetlight, and sign I see
Play a part in this mystery, where do I go?
I've got somewhere to be
Where do I turn, when its my turn to be free?

Now I'm starting to see
That this place was never meant for me
I've filled up your pages, wrestled the clocks
Now I'm waiting for the rain to stop
Now I'm starting to be
Another heart just living for a dream
I'm holding you close, Im leaving this town
I think I'll escape where the snow falls around

Now I'm starting to be
Another heart just living for a dream
I'm holding you close, Im leaving this town
I think I'll escape where the snow falls around
