you're from the family that moved in up the valley it's lucky i picked you up and not somebody else we'll have to turn inland there's been a landslide at the quarry though i say it myself you couldn't have better help if you found yourself losing your way though here you can still see the moon though it's the middle of the morning

you can smell the clay
like i say, you can count yourself lucky not many people know this way let's turn off for a minute, i've seen something let's take a look now hold on tight, this stretch has needed fixing for years over there i knew it, can read these roads like a book now if you drive them every day in the last half hour a lot of cars have been through here

here we are on a hill over there see all the cars parked in a field and the crowd walking down the fenceline

remember where we left the car

remember it's a white valiant
