HOTEL NEVER

Â© Electric Babylon Music Author: M.M.

The people in the next room are a world away, but I can still hear everything they say, Iâ€™m paid up thru the summer Iâ€™d hate to leave, radio says one thing t.v. another I donâ€™t know what to believe.

The people in the next room are getting on my nerves, but every tenant gets just what he deserves, I stare out the window out where the airport used to be, not a figure makes sense except upon poetry.

The people in the next room I donâ€™t wish them any harm, but just to get rid of â€™em for a little while I punched the fire alarm, her letters ask when will I be coming home, a BMW rolls by I admire the chrome.

The people in the next room donâ€™t realize who I am, but I could paint them into a hell of a jam, the room service is good but I donâ€™t use it much, itâ€™s that tip you have to give and the bell boys grateful touch.

The people in the next room donâ€™t even know Iâ€™m in here, they donâ€™t understand midnight and that bottomless fear, the way this room is decorated itâ€™s really not me at all, I donâ€™t know which escort service I should call.

The people in the next room are just a wall away, but they still canâ€™t seem to hear anything I say, tonight I study unborn and revise my doom, Iâ€™ll just have to learn to live with the people in the next room.
