RAISING TITANIC

Just to feel your soggy bones, justify your agony, because legacy your only lifeboat, betrays humanity, and everyday brings me closer to your salvation, and every hour wreaks one more expectation, I need to know that there is someone to blame, for the infamy that blasphemies your fame.

I wana grab the planet by the collar, I wana do something gigantic, not swallowing my pride, but raising Titanic.
She's like that first love I lost before I knew how to lose, I hate to be stuck with a choice that I didn't get to chose, I imagined this perfect love now it can never be, the carcass of my dreams floating on the bottom of the sea.

My stomachs debt is growling, my appetite is manic, I can be reborn with necrophilia, by raising Titanic.
Her name is Titanic, and I will never let her go, and one day I will collect, all that she does owe, I will never forgive you, everybody's laughing at me, but you will be mine again someday, and I will reclaim my treasure from the sea.

Just to put you back on that pedestal, where you belong, so I don't have to doubt your faithfulness, forgive your wrong.
My futures wit is in denial, my past in panic, but the oil will flow back into the blood, in raising Titanic.
