STREET LEVEL

Â© Electric Babylon Music Author: M.M.

As he watched the stripper show off her implants, he got a hard on but he felt like crying, after the fall and the taste of the dirt, trying to pick your self up is much harder than dying, he cheated on his wife so she got all the money, and as they say he's just left with what he deserves, but he still dreams of his average ex wife's body, as he pouts over the strippers curves.

Siren screams thru the city can't tell where it's coming from, but it's easy enough to tell where it's head'en, the seventh seal just broke on a bottle of Jack, and the motion just feels like Armageddon, he swallows his drink and can't find himself lost, the worlds full of reflections every way you turn, but a strangers eyes hold the truest mirror, you just never know; all you do is learn.

You know I really had it all; he says to his new friend, a beautiful wife a good job and two great kids, I didn't mean to take the meaning for granted, but a wrong turn led me to a left turn; here I am on the skids, they say shame is the deepest river but let me ask you this, what if the wrong you did was simply a mistake, they call it shame I call it life are you with me my friend, we all seem to go thru hell for heavens sake.

And up; skyward in the towers of Babylon, where they build the beast of business on rumor and whim, the rules of street level don't mean a thing up here, he looks down; no animosity it simply just doesn't mean sh to him, he's got his wife on hold and his girlfriend on the line, he covers the receiver; hey Paul what's going on down there, some fing drunk got hit by a car coming out of that strip joint, great they've got my car blocked in; babe I can't go nowhere.
