THE FARE

Â© Electric Babylon Music Author: M.M.

A lonely saxophone moans off in the distant night, it's desperate musical mating call goes lost, I read in my room under this circle of light, i know exactly what this price cost.
Love caresses me from a long distance lover, as i slip form my hypothesis into practice, but I escaped that desire and went undercover, and shook direct hit for a near miss.
Oh this empty room has bled it's loneliness into me, but I feel like I don't need a thing, it's just this idea of freedom that wont set me free, like in the cold winter how we long for spring.
In this religion I have found I have lost myself, I've lost every potential to first glance worth, I wish I'd never seen that book upon the shelf, I wish I'd never called this planet Earth.
My body just cant seem to make up my mind, it's not what we miss but the things we see that lead us astray, it's not the chain link it's the substance that does bind, but the world is in your head and you cannot get away.
Glory be to the fire on high, words just mean the things we say they mean, I believe the fairy tales but I don't believe my eyes, because I have heard about things I've never seen.
Was I alive yesterday I'm not really sure, will I be alive tomorrow in any kind of relative sense, because tomorrow is like a disease for which there is no cure, and when it gets here it's already past tense.
Who was it that let this ancient aggravation loose, I need not know in the name of god, you know a rope can be a lifeline or a noose, and east of Eden lies the land of Nod.

I bowed just now to the break of day, the early morning light broke thru so clean, I can talk about it but I really cannot say, what it may or may not mean.
The thoughts like a ghost cannot touch the flesh, words are only breath pushing air, we are organized microscopic mesh. hoping in the end there's enough left to pay the fare.
