Wake up April, it'll be summer soon

And you'll be sipping your morning coffee in the afternoon

Walking slowly because there's nowhere to go

But your heart keeps beating so, so, so

Everyone in the neighborhood

Wishes you well as much as any person could

It's a friendly forever, a forgotten now

So when we don't remember we won't know how

Wake up April it's been one cruel year

And we all feel better knowing that you're back here

You wouldn't believe it, so I might as well lie

But I almost had to say goodbye

So wake up America, now they're setting me free

And I've been the next big thing since I can remember me

But I'd take the light air of permanent care

Before perfect hair and heavy stares, before perfect hair and heavy stares

There's a break in the choir double wide, we slipped outside

There's a break in the choir double wide, we slipped
outside

outside

outside

Out the back door, too wide

Out the back door, too wide

Out the back door
