(The end is near!)

Graffiti worth reading rarely is written on walls that are worth writing on
So if that is true then believe me now you worth reading
graffiti is gone
While we're on it get off it the days of the prophet of writing his words on the wall Are gone now behind us but somehow we find ourselves desperately reading it all

Repent! (repent!) Obey! (obey!) The end is near I tagged and marked and bragged and barked and I was here

We wrote on the surface with no real purpose or reason or rhyme what to write Out of place and outdated and poorly illustrated and that would be being polite And not for one loss but who's counting the cost and then figuring out what we're losing I would guess we are losing much less than we figured unless that's confusing

Repent! (repent!) Obey! (obey!) The end is near I tagged and marked and bragged and barked and I was here

When it's all done and stated look at what was created and don't take it out on us all We try taking it lighter and don't blame the writer just do what I do blame the war

Repent! (repent!) Obey! (obey!) The end is near I tagged and marked and bragged and barked and I was here

Graffiti worth reading rarely is written on walls that are worth writing on
graffiti is gone

Graffiti worth reading rarely is written on walls that are worth writing on
graffiti is gone
