Turn round don't keep running straight out the door
You're caught between a rock and something Hurting at the core

You jumped the wire and you headed down on old Montgomery Lane
You were half way home to heaven when you heard that voice again

She said, always keep me close Even cross a distant sea
One more thing, yeah before I go Don't forget to miss me

Trouble came to tear him down

And laid his plans to waste Thoughts of her keep coming strong, like a feeling he could taste

He sent her words as sweet as wine and stars on a full moon night
She sent him kisses soft as rain all bathed in a summer's light

The day drew near when they would meet
She rose two hours for dawn
She tried so hard not to cry but now the tears had come
