I moved slowly
Through the numbness of the same
And I washed of the memory
That I'd caught in the rain

Maybe I should have known
But I was angry and I'd like to wait
For the curtains to open
Before bitter love on your face

You said it was too cold
You said it was too late

(Chorus)
Then you stood in the doorway
With your shadow growing louder
Your lips started to move
And I heard you speak
It was all to faded
And my ears couldn't believe what I was hearing
You said it was now or never
Now or Never

I needed you now
More than the reality of haste
I'd built on some moment
That had left an empty space
I should have seen the signs
That the road we had taken
Was wet and slippery
With pieces that were broken

You said it was too cold
You said it was too late

Then you stood in the doorway
With your shadow growing louder
Your lips started to move
And I heard you speak
It was all to faded
And my ears couldn't believe what I was hearing
You said it was now or never

Now or Never
Now or Never
