You'll stop loving me, then you'll let go. I bet my hands for all that you chose. Thought you couldn't live with me. That's what you'd say and never mean.

And I just lay here

and I just breathe, though it feels like I'm suffocating.
In the end someone's always missing. Back against the wall, did you ever care at all? I can't breathe.
You'll stop loving me, still I hold on. I gave my soul to another lost cause. Thought you'd never grow tired of me. You're so good at proving you wrong.

Lying on the ground listening to the sound of a broken heart beat ever since you left me.
