You love, you trust, you're good, you'll do what you're told

You want to and you will, I know you well

But you fight it, it wears you down, it's bigger than you

It's bad for the soul but it's so good for the moment

But I think I can keep it together

Yeah I think I can weather it all

'Cause the sky never falls

And the world never ends

And for all the things that I can't control

I have thick skin

It smashes, it crashes, it treads so lightly

Gets in your head, you shut your eyes and ears so tight, see

There's no coincidence, it's all in your mind

There are no accidents, it's all by design

But I think I can keep it together

Yeah I think I can weather it all

'Cause the sky never falls

And the world never ends

And for all the things that I can't control

I have thick skin

You may be strong, you may be brave

You may be lost and you may be saved

You may not know and you might think you know

But everywhere you go it will follow

You love, you trust, you're good, you'll do what you're told

you'll do what you're told

But I think I can keep it together

Yeah I think I can weather it all

'Cause the sky never falls

And the world never ends

And for all the things that I can't control

For all the things

For all the things that lack control

I have thick skin

I have thick skin

You love, you trust, you're good, you'll do what you're told you'll do what you're told
