I stared into that burning wood
It was hypnotizing
The mood all around seemed to treat me good
And the moon was rising

And the moist breeze seemed to curl her hair
I was realizing
This butterfly could take me there
But she left me in hiding

So I used a summer to break her fall
And I saw the spring leave me
Gave it up and I sold it all
For her love, my darling
A year for love for nothing

Underneath that blanket of stars
The fire was ever blinding
I thought she would never fade far
But she left me in finding

So I used a summer to break her fall
And I saw the spring leave me
Gave it up and I sold it all
For her love, my darling
A year for love for nothing

Into her eyes I could not speak
Of my longing
In the words less passed it stirred in me
And left me pining

So I used a summer to break her fall
And I saw the spring leave me
Gave it up and I sold it all
For her love, my darling
A year for love for nothing
Gave it up and I sold it all
A year for love for nothing?
No, that year of love was something
