F. Tackett, S. Murphy, and B. Payne the TV cold fire burning been up all night and the light has left your eyes I was always runnin' to you not fast enough my little boy blue ever get where you wanted to go?
you knew the way the times, the good and the bad was all that we had in the end it let us down I'm tired and I feel the blame all my prayers sound the same stranded here with no relief abandoned here beyond belief vale of tears
empty room
once was filled
cold and still
this ragged town so desperate in the rain has no mercy, no shelter from the pain never mind the promised tomorrow given for a heartfelt sorrow always tomorrow the promise in a vale of tears
the raucous sounds and shining lights weave their tales into the night and the knowing lingers bright all the love my sweet tender friend it's still around, it never ends the past is just an alibi it's all the same the weather's turning warmer every day and I think the rains are done at least that's what they say thought I saw you just the other night I knew my eyes weren't seeing right then again I see you all the time everywhere

even now this anger's replacin' faith I somehow the heart remembers you
tell me 'bout the promise tomorrow given for a heartfelt sorrow always remember the promise
