You rise like brume
And disappear without saying goodbye
(You know it's just not right)
See the fading night sky draped over you
(Like the scent of garden phlox)

It leaves me hanging fast to a dream
Waiting for love to be anything every day to me
And though I can't ever say you're mine
I give you all of my time

Born from ocean flower
As white as pearl and as bare as your thighs
(You reflect all light)
From deep of sea I hear your voice
(Thoughts in which I delight)

It leaves me hanging fast to a dream
Waiting for love to be anything every day to me
And though I can't ever say you're mine
I give you all of my time
