

New Medicine

"Lullaby"

Visit "Lullaby" on MotoLyrics.com

So where do we begin? It must be thirty-five years . . .
You've the breath of my mother, the life of a stranger;
And there's so much to tell - so much I need to know.
All of the stories, and reasons
But your face I remember and your breath I remember
Take me in your arms, take me in your arms
So go out tonight and look up at the stars,
The light that you see is as old as I am.
And that's what I see, when I gaze in your eyes
Loving a ghost lost in confusion of time - but our love remains
Through these brightest hours.
And my secret world
And your face I remember - and your breath I remember
Take me in your arms, take me in your arms

Visit New Medicine page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.