Rise.

Iâ€™m everything I am and everything I have been brings me here to stand against you.

I bled my heart, these sleeves stained red.

I donâ€™t think it matters anymore.

I have made my own decisionâ€¦you should leave this alone.

You say you want the best, but in whose best interest?

I donâ€™t want conflict. I made my choice.

I walked away from who I was, and it brought me
further from you.

I have made my own decisionâ€¦you should leave this
alone.

Leave it alone.

As you admire what youâ€™re trying to doâ€¦hanging â€˜saidâ€™ beautiful pictures in sullen rooms.

As if your hand can shelter me from the night.

A shadowâ€™s a shadow, but in yours resent hides.

And she blooms, shifting foundation core, shifting the poles,

bringing lifeâ€¦the newest weâ€™ve ever known.

Blow out the candle, the vigil ends, the splinters mend.

Look in the face of a dear dead friend.

I will be raised up and Iâ€™m not looking to oppression for a cause.

I read the braille of your unwritten laws, breathe in the exhale of all things lost

so I can see myself without the tint of your vision.

Bad architectsâ€™ fetish throbs for collision.

And in the wake of disasters so small you could walk by them and not notice at all,

the ripples will inherit the earth.

Rise

I have made my own decisionâ€¦you should leave this
alone.

Leave it alone.
