I'm stuck here on the freeway Traffic bad as hell and I miss your warm embrace there's nothing on the radio no-one in the car, just the promise of a long delay

The sun is disappearing over the bend and the horizon sings a new song
The melody's familiar sings into my soul and brings my heart right back to you

The moon is climbing higher illuminate the sky, not a cloud in sight tonight stars are winking at me the traffic dissipates; now I'm speeding home to you

And I know when I arrive you'll be dressed and waiting With the smell of cherry blossoms in your hair
And as I'm walking through the front door and I see you standing there I'll tell you, I've never loved you more than now
