See the red flames light the sky,
As all shelters disappear,
Nearby, hear the victim's cry,
It's so good we are not here.

And as the fire surrounds you,
Feel its joyous rush,
Wrapping round you like a shroud,
So lucky it can't touch.

Other faces come in view,
Gasping in each breath of air,
With all they did to me and you,
Remind me why I should even care.

It's justice, come at last,
Just like I swore it would,
Brighter than a lightning flash,
And pouring like a flood,

You don't need to worry for us,
We'll fly to Venus,
Don't need to worry for us,
We'll fly to Venus.

Don't sweat, I know where I'm going,

Don't sweat, I know what I'm doing,
Don't sweat, I won't hit the ground,
When I'm falling down.

Getting harder now to see,
Shadows start to run,
Somehow you look at me,
Shapes come undone.

Swirls and swirls alight, out from their source,
Colors coming at you like some elemental force.

You don't need to worry for us,
We'll fly to Venus,
Don't need to worry for us,

We'll fly to Venus.

Don't sweat, I know where I'm going,
Don't sweat, I know what I'm doing,
Don't sweat, I won't hit the ground,
When I'm falling down,
When I'm falling down,
Don't bring me down.
