Staring at pictures on the walls
They tell stories of open fields and waterfalls
I'd take you to see them but you've seen them all
So I'll stay inside and watch the sunrise start to fall

And this summer beach,
Is just so hard to reach

Cause I'm still waking to the sound of bells
In between the time the skyline shines and darkness dwells
And you look lost, as far as I can tell
You might as well

Watchin' the telephone stare
It's silence reminds us of a time when we didn't care
I'd tell you about it but you were there
And if memories were money we'd be millionaires

Cause I'm still waking to the sound of bells
In between the time the skyline shines and darkness dwells
And you look lost, as far as I can tell
You might as well

There's no place I would rather be
This second home is home to me,

Cause I'm still waking to the sound of bells
In between the time the skyline shines and darkness dwells
And you look lost, as far as I can tell
You might as well
