This world is desolate; these clouds are reminiscent
Of all of God's mistakes; how could we seal our fate?
The beauty that we've ridden, the sins that aren't forgiven
This world will never last

If I told you my world was ending
Would you take my hand again?
If I told you our love was never ending
Would you leave me here alone?

The countless debts we've paid, this world we took in vain
The flower slowly wilts; I feel a growing guilt
The beauty that we've ridden, the love that is forbidden
This world will never last

If I told you my world was ending
Would you take my hand again?
If I told you our love was never ending
Would you leave me here alone?

The countless lives we've ridden, the sins that aren't
forgiven
This world will never last
The beauty that we've ridden, the love that is forbidden
This world will never last

If I told you my world was ending
Would you take my hand again?
If I told you our love was never ending
Would you leave me here alone?

If I told you my world was ending
Would you take my hand again?
If I told you our love was never ending
Would you leave me here alone?
