last night at 4 am you said goodbye your eyes betrayed you, I could feel you cry and all the while I could hear my voice struggling to pretend that it was my choice and I'd give up forever to change this routine and sooner or later we glimpse the unseen too late I found your note too late I saw the signs and felt a moment of truth and no I never tried, and you pulled away and I let you fade away into the day every word that you spoke to me it danced on air, it had a life of its own and now you've flown away but I'll find a way to make you mine one more time every part of me aches for your skin I can still feel the warmth that you hold within the sweetest soul I have ever met promise me darling that you won't forget and I fall down into your deep brown eyes I'll wing my way back to you through clear blue skies

too late I found your note

it danced on air, it had a life of its own

and now the silence intoxicates me and I see the sun in your look the fairy tale is just beginning and I can't close the book

I'll sip no more of bitterness, I'm on my way the distance cannot keep us apart, come what may

too late I found your note
but I won't let you fade away into the day
