hanging round the diner just trying to break even standing on a corner just waiting to collect all of the money that you owe me hello honey, how have you been well, I didn't know that you'd been lost I couldn't see the difference between what you had and what you owed you didn't seem to care or even worry about the distance back when it mattered but now it doesn't

and we won't be going too much further
and we won't be breaking much new ground and we won't be feeling that much freer from here on out well, I was hoping that what we had might last if only for a while is it good to see a long lost friend or would you rather not go through the trouble to fake a smile hey, maybe next time, don't even bother

I'll get up to see you out and watch you through the window but I'll be thinking to myself that nothing's really changed moving in circles somewhere behind me it used to matter but now it doesn't

from here on out ...
